No doubt the letter of the Govt order is to the effect that calculations should be made separately in temporary & permanent vacancies, but adhering this principle in practice will have its own difficulties and complications.

I had once submd this in person to the Chairman, who then thought that no hard and fast rule need be laid down in this

Now that a demand has been raised, a reply is due and definite orders are solicited in this behalf

It may be perhaps suggested that a confidential Circular may be issued to all Unit Officers stating that Govt do not wish to lay down any hard & fast rule in this behalf reducing the whole question of recruitment to a mathematical entity but expect that when Class IV vacancies as general & special, Care is taken to see that no undue preference is given to any class of advancements, but that a series of promotions is ~~Circulated~~ and that in

All vacancies, permanent or temporary (exceeding 4 months), have to be taken into consideration in determining whether a particular vacancy should be regarded as general or special. Keep & put up a reply. Unless a similar doubt has been expressed by any Mem. Officer, we need not issue any general circular.

Order No. 465-664/C.R.B.47/16.7.28 ~~123-373 of 6th July 1927~~

Paragraph 2 of G.O.No.67-126/ C.R.B.5-26-4, dated 8th July 1927 contains general instructions regarding the classification of vacancies into General and Special, for purposes of recruitment to the ministerial ranks of the public service. Doubts have been expressed by certain officers as to ~~the mode~~ whether this classification should be made separately (a) for temporary and permanent vacancies and (b) for vacancies in each of the four divisions into which ministerial appointments are grouped.

In consultation with the C. R. B., Govt. are pleased to direct that the classification into general and special Vacancies shall be made separately for (1) permanent appointments and (2) temporary appointments likely to last for 3 months or ~~longer~~, ~~but no distinction~~ need be made between vacancies in the ~~different divisions (1, 2, 3 and 4)~~. It is important, however, that vacancies, both permanent and temporary, should be registered strictly in the order of their occurrence so that their classification into general and special may be uniform, automatic and capable of ready verification.
